

Summary of relevant skills and experiences

Chiara Angiolini (Milan, 1989) is post-doc researcher in private law at the University of Trento. Her research focuses on fundamental rights and private law in a European perspective, with specific regard to gender studies, property law and data protection.

She is involved in several research projects and she also participated in a European Union RE-Jus project (ended in october 2018), in which the relationships between european and national private law and fundamental rights were analysed with the judicial dialogue method (<https://www.rejus.eu/>).

She is author of some publications and conference presentations concerning gender-related issues and judicial dialogue in Europe. She graduated cum laude at the University of Pisa (2014), and obtained a PhD cum laude at the Ca' Foscari University of Venice (2018). She is member of the Rete Lenford, a lawyers association specialised on LGBTQI issues.